

Disaster Recovery

Protect Your Business from Disaster!

Of course you've done everything to protect your business in the event of disaster, natural or otherwise. You've got off-site backups of all your important data. You've even spent plenty of money on systems to protect you in the event of a power outage caused by equipment failure or acts of terrorism.

So, how about your telephone system?

If your telephone lines go out because the off-site telecom switch isn't as well protected as you are, then how are your prospects—let alone your existing customers—going to keep in contact with you? How will your employees feel about having no way to contact their managers? We all know how many businesses closed after Hurricane Katrina simply because they lost contact with their potential revenue earners. Lauttamus can help.

In any emergency or disaster, the key to survival will always be maintaining communications with your customers, your managers, and your employees. In the world we live in today, everyone expects communication to take place instantly and "on demand." Lauttamus has all the answers you need to keep the world communicating with you. In the event of any short- or long-term disruption to your traditional telephone service, we can ensure that anyone who needs to keep in touch with you can do so. We'll arrange everything so that your calls will automatically transfer to our call center. We'll take your calls and transfer them directly to cell phones, home phones, or wherever you want us to send them. We can take voicemail messages, even route your calls into our call center so they are answered professionally every time.

If you have an existing "auto attendant," why not replicate it in its entirety on our platforms so that no one will ever know that you've even had a problem? You'll protect your customer relationships by being able to assure them that it's still "business as usual." Orders are getting processed, sales inquiries are being taken, and support calls are getting the same priority as always. The benefit to you is no loss of revenue.

Should disaster strike, your employees will need to know if they should go into the office, stay at home, or go to another location. If a serious emergency should arise, for example, terrorist activity, you could give information to your staff regarding where the nearest shelters are situated in any local area. When the emergency is over, you could tell everyone when it's safe to return to work without having to call everyone individually. You will then return your call activity to your usual carrier.

Lauttamus Services for Disaster Recovery are surprisingly affordable. Call our sales office today and discover for yourself how quickly, easily, and economically we can protect you, your customers, your employees, and your business.

Please, call us before it's too late for your business!
